For example, [if one writes a single letter on Shabbat, he is not liable for transgressing a prohibition by law of Torah. However,] if one [starts out] writing the word שמעון, [and, by doing so, he] writes the letters שם, or, if one [begins] writing the word נחור, [and, in doing so, he] writes נח, or, if he writes דנ [as the first two letters] of the name דניאל [then, in all these cases, even though he did not complete the full names he intended to write, nevertheless, the two-letter names are words in their own right: שם, נח and דן and he thereby becomes liable for the prohibition of writing on Shabbat, even though he only violated “from one of them,” i.e., a part of the prohibition] (Torat Kohanim 4:197).

community (court) and the anointed priest in this context. If the community (court) pronounced an erroneous law and as a result, others acted erroneously, then the community (court) is liable. However, if the anointed priest pronounced an erroneous law, he is *only liable if he himself acts on this, whereas if others acted on his erroneous ruling, he is not liable, for in his case, our verse here says, "for his sin which he has committed." The plain meaning of this verse is, however, according to the Aggadic explanation: When the High Priest sins, this is the very guilt of the people, because they are dependent on him to effect their atonement and to pray for them, and now he has become impaired (Vayikra Rabbah 5:6). פֶּר — [literally, a bull.] One might think that this could refer to an old bull. Scripture, however, adds, בֶּן [young animal]. But if it must be a young bull, one might yet suggest that it be a very young one. Scripture, however, has already stated פֶּר [a term which independently means a mature animal, thus teaching us that it must not be too young a bull]. So how [do we reconcile both mature and yet young?] It refers to a three year old bull (Torat Kohanim 4:208). (5) To the Tent of Appointment — when it comes to the Sanctuary. But what is specified in the case of the peace-offerings that is not specified here? [Nothing at all! So why mention the peace-offering altogether?] In order to connect this case to that of the peace-offering, as follows: Just as the peace-offering had to be designated for the specific purpose of a peace-offering, so too, this sacrifice had to be designated for its specific purpose, and just as peace-offerings [bring] peace to the world, so too, this sacrifice [brings] peace to the world (Torat Kohanim 4:231). And in Shechitat kodashim [Tractate Zevachim], it is taught that this [seemingly superfluous phrase, “just as was separated ...,”] is necessary here, in order to learn from it the rule, that we do not derive a law from another matter which is itself only derived [and not explicitly stated in Scripture], when it comes to holy sacrifices. See chapter [five of Zevachim.] Eizehu mekoman (Zevachim 49b). to," i.e., similar to the expression "apart from." [Thus, in addition to the explanations given earlier (see Rashi verse 3:4), when verse 9 says, "And he should remove the diaphragm with [part of] the liver, along with the kidneys," the meaning is "he should remove the diaphragm, besides (removing part of) the liver and the kidneys."] (12) To a pure place — Since there was a place outside the city designated for the deposit of impure articles, namely, to cast plague-stricken stones [which have thereby become impure] (see later, Leviticus 14:40), and to serve as a cemetery, Scripture needed to qualify this instance of "outside the camp" — which [in the case of Jerusalem] was equivalent to outside the city — as specifically referring to "a pure place." Outside the camp — meaning: Outside [the boundaries of all] three camps [of the entire encampment of Israel, when they were set up in the desert, the three being: The camp of the Divine Presence, the Levite camp and the general Israelite camp. That was in the desert]. But when it came to the permanent structure [of the Holy Temple in Jerusalem, the phrase "outside the camp" means] outside the city, as is explained by our Rabbis in Tractate Yoma (68a), and Tractate Sanhedrin (42b). אל שפף הדשן — means: To the place where they poured out (שופכין) the ashes which were removed from the altar, as the verse says (Leviticus 6:4), "and he will take out the ashes ... outside the camp." Thus, it will be burnt [in the place] where the ashes are deposited — [But the verse has just told us this!] Surely, it does not need to restate it! However, [this repetition] comes to teach us that [the bull must be burnt in the place where the ashes are deposited,] even if there are no actual ashes present [at the time] (Torat Kohanim 4:239). (13) The ... community of Israel — This refers to the [Great] Sanhedrin [the Supreme Court of Israel, seated at the Holy Temple] (Torat Kohanim 4:241). Because a matter was rebels, then his cabinet will remain intact; however, if the entire country rebels, then his cabinet will not remain intact. So too, here: When the anointed priest sinned (referred to in the verses leading up to verse 6), then the name of holiness is still attached to the Sanctuary; however, once all of Israel transgresses (as verse 13 states, "If the entire community of Israel commits [a sin]"), God forbid, then the holiness retracts (Zevachim 41b). And why are these details not specified here? The School of Rabbi Yishmael has taught: This can be compared to a king who was furious with his beloved friend, but shortened [the account of] his offense, because of the affection [he had for him] (Zevachim 41a). (20) He should do to the bull — i.e., with this bull, Just as he did to the bull [sacrificed] as a sin-offering — i.e., just as is specified in the case of the bull of the anointed priest. the bull just as he did to the bull [sacrificed] as a sin-offering — thus he should do to it. Thus the priest will make atonement for them [the community], and they will be forgiven. (21) And he will take the bull outside the camp, and burn it, just as he burned the first bull. It is a sin-offering for the congregation. two kidneys, [details] which are specified there [in the case of the bull of the anointed priest, even though] they are not specified here (Zevachim 41a). [Now, Scripture points us to the anointed priest's sin-offering to learn the service of sacrificing this bull. However, here, the verse does specify the procedure involving sprinkling of blood, and so, these instructions have been effectively repeated.

Why so?] The repetition of [details of] the service procedures [involving the sprinkling of blood] comes to teach us that if [even] one application of blood is missing [in the service, the offering is] invalid (Torat Kohanim 4:252). [But surely we would know this, without Scripture having to tell us: what would make one think that one missing application of blood would still result in a valid offering?] Because we have found regarding the applications [of blood] upon the outer altar, that if the priest made [only] one application, he nevertheless effected atonement. Thus, Scripture needs to tell us here, that [in the case of this bull, where the blood was sprinkled inside the Sanctum.] that [the omission of even] one application [of blood] affects [the validity of the offering]. (22) אשר נשיא יחטא — [literally, “Which the leader will commit a sin.” Why does Scripture not simply say, “If the leader commits a sin ... ,” like in the cases of verses 3 and 13 above? Scripture, by beginning this verse with the word אשר, is using] an expression reminiscent of [the dictum starting with the word] אשרי, “fortunate is ...,” namely: “Fortunate is the generation whose leader [does not hold himself too high, but rather.] gives attention to bringing an [offering which effects] atonement for his unintentional sin — and how much more [fortunate is that generation,] if their leader [is humble enough to] be remorseful for those sins
